

clear that in India promoting children's rights is a government priority, that is enshrined within the constitution and protected in legislation. Despite this, children in India continue to face challenges in attaining these rights, particularly those related to access to education, forced labour, and child marriage. is it that tough to teach them ?. Good Ifjnwrfwfjnpnlwrg. we as a team have decided to create an education and awareness site for the children in which they will not only get to know their rights but will also be delightful for them to learn . To make this site an interesting site for the children we have our salient features marked for the site which include interactive games and quizzes , engaging visuals ,storytelling , parental involvement , multilingual support ,access to support , etc.. We all know visuals and the story telling have the maximum impact on the mind of the children and they usually remember for long time. I still remember the stories of my grand ma. (Lighter tone). To attain all of the points mentioned earlier we have planned to use technology domains which include front end , ui/ux designing , game development , etc. And to answer to question that we asked earlier ; it is not that tough.that brings us to the end sincerely appreciate your attention today . Thank You
